It is my belief that government has gone too far in it s pursuit/vendetta against Microsoft. When the public buys more goods from a certain company it is usually because that company had the foresight to see the needs of the public. Also the public has in essence cast it s vote by buying goods and services from Microsoft thereby showing it s trust and it s wish to continue a consumer/producer relationship with that company. It makes me wonder what is next on the government s agenda to attack and break up. This divide and conquer strategy taken by our government can next attack anything American. The people should beware and vote accordingly to be assured that those who intend to use big government against the public are not in a position to do so.
